

Cadaveric sacral neuromodulation course

January 16th 2024, University of Leeds

In conjunction with Axonics Ltd, we are pleased to announce the 2nd Yorkshire cadaveric sacral neuromodulation course. Aimed at trainees and consultants wanting to establish themselves in this technique (both general surgical and urological), this course gives a thorough grounding in both the indications and practical technique of sacral neuromodulation. It features a combination of small group teaching and cadaveric surgery by a faculty of experts in the field.

The course runs all-day on the 16th January 2024. An introductory lecture will be held on the evening of the 15th January, for which overnight accommodation and subsistence will be arranged at no extra cost. Participants are strongly encouraged to attend this.

Course cost is £250 (free for Yorkshire & Humber trainees).

Course convener is Mr Keith Chapple, Consultant Colorectal Surgeon, Sheffield Teaching Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust

To book a place visit <https://www.maxcourse.co.uk/yhss/guestHome.asp> or contact j.johnson1@leeds.ac.uk